ARSADI - Neon Moonlight

Twenty fifteen
In the springtime
When I saw you
Standing in the crowd, singing your heart out

On the dancefloor
In the strobe lights
Home made costumes
You were dressed like Arya Stark and hit me in the heart

With a firm shot
Time’s a blind spot
I was thinking, only one thought
“Don’t let this evening ever fade!”

As I painted vivid colours in my mind
From student nations to ringing church bells
Right there and then my life felt new and redefined
I understood, oh you got me good

Like the sky folds
Like seasons turning
Like the neon moonlight in my soul

A scent of May rain
On the rooftop
City glowing
Blackbirds singing loud
My senses amplified

And I drifted
Out of orbit
Feeling weightless
Like comets in disguise
We were burning in the night

And you showed me, that this could be
Something more than hazy memories
More than a dream that fades away

If I could I would have painted Starry Night
The sky was spinning in a gentle silence
But I was overtaken by its blinding lights
I understood, oh you got me good

Like the sky folds
Like seasons turning
Like the neon moonlight in my soul

The sky folds
Seasons turn
Neon moon
