ARSADI – The Dream (1984)

Waking up slowly
Sun rays through window blinds
Seems almost holy
The bright light will clear my mind
Laying still pondering
'Bout times we live in now
Honesty got lost somehow

I had a dream were
I was Mr. Smith at
The Ministry of Truth
Throwing history down the memory hole
But I'm not sure of Being awake now
Is kinder to my soul

I, I heard someone say "comfort comes with chains
if people walk blindly on memory lanes"
I, I realised that freedom slowly fades
If no one breaks free from the silent parade

A sacred mission
To reach commanding heights
Hidden ambitions
Disguised as noble knights
Just like the butcher
They cut it piece by piece
Selling it all for your relief

My head is spinning
Their facts keep twisting
Is this the news or am I stuck in 1984?
My dream is bleeding
Into the daylight
I don't know what scares me more

I, I heard someone say "comfort comes with chains
if people walk blindly on memory lanes"
I, I realised that freedom slowly fades
If no one breaks free from the silent parade

I, I heard someone say "comfort comes with chains
if people walk blindly on memory lanes"
I, I realised that freedom slowly fades
If no one breaks free from the silent parade
