ARSADI – Towards a Remedy

It’s almost empty on the E4
On my way towards a remedy
I’ve been driving on for hours now
Up north may be the place I need

There’s a soothing call from the mountains
But the melody is bittersweet
As I try to tell myself

That if I’ve never been beaten up
If something’s never ever knocked me down
Then have I really lived enough?
Yeah I will never stop!

Through the great and silent forests
Green spruces lay their hands on me
The dusk rolls in with violet skies
And paints my lakes with memories

Time slows down on gravel roads, but
The purpose lies ahead of me
And I keep on telling myself

That if I’ve never been beaten up
If something’s never ever knocked me down
Then have I really lived enough?
No I will never give, no I will never give up

And if I never have felt the pain
When I gave it all but all in vain
Sometimes down is the way to the top
Yeah, I will never stop!

I stop the car where night falls wide
The stars are calm and still
They scatter light on every soul
And guide my restless will
They lead me through the quiet dark
But I am not there now
I will get there somehow

That if I’ve never been beaten up
If something’s never ever knocked me down
Then have I really lived enough?
No I will never give, no I will never give up

And if I never have felt the pain
When I gave it all but all in vain
Sometimes down is the way to the top
Yeah, I will never stop!
